

Aromatic - Evergreen - Edible foliage

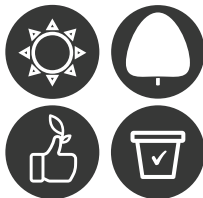

Curry tree is a highly aromatic shrub/small tree with edible leaves. Foliage is commonly used in Indian and South-east Asian cuisine. Leaves will release a strong flavour when cooked with food or fried in oil. Clusters of small white flowers are followed by pea-sized decorative dark red-black berries. Suited to warm temperate to subtropical climates. Best in a sunny position.

Flavour: Foliage has a strong 'curry' flavour.

Culture: Can be grown as a tree or bushy shrub. Tolerant of shade in warmer climates.

Size: 3 x 2 metres.

Care: For more information on planting, maintenance, and care visit flemings.com.au

Curry Tree